Montrose Beach melee

Charges filed as top cop defends police response

Chicago Tribune

Edna Velazquez looked with frustration at the debris still scattered across the park at Montrose Beach on Monday morning as a dozen seagulls picked at the six-pack rings and hundreds of bottle caps stamped into muddy grass.

Velazquez was asked by Chicago police Sunday night to close her Mexican food stand and restaurant early when a melee broke out among a large crowd gathered for an illegal concert. Four police officers were slightly injured, a squad car was damaged and five people were charged in what Velazquez and others said was the most recent in a series of violent incidents at the popular beach. Two women were shot near Montrose Beach two weeks ago.

"My employees don't want to work for me anymore," declared Velazquez, who said her family business, Daniel's Mexican Food, has lost all but one of its eight non-family employees. "They don't think it's safe."

Sunday's violence on the North Side prompted fresh questions about police staffing and crowd control tactics just a week after a bloody Independence Day weekend left 82 shot, 16 of them fatally, across the city. At a press conference meant to highlight the Police Department's gun seizures, Superintendent Garry McCarthy grew frustrated as reporters kept questioning him about what went wrong at Montrose Beach.

"I'm trying to tell you all about gun violence here in the city, which is our number one thing," McCarthy said at the Grand Crossing district station on the South Side. "We had people who died over the weekend, and a disturbance at a park is something that we'll fix moving forward, no two ways about it. But we have a problem here, and I'd like to bring attention to it."

In the fallout from the Montrose Beach melee, five males were criminally charged, two with felonies for aggravated battery to a police officer. Two Aurora men, Efrain Saucedo, 23, and Emmanuel Lopez, 19, were seen throwing bottles that struck two officers as they responded to the disturbance, police said.

A third suspect, a Chicago juvenile, 17, was also charged with felony criminal damage to property and misdemeanor mob action. Two others were charged with misdemeanors—a Summit man, 19, and an Aurora man, 22, for aggravated assault on a police officer and mob action, police said.

Meanwhile, Ald. James Cappleman (46th), whose ward includes Montrose Beach, praised Sunday evening's police response but expressed concern that nearby Chicago Park District parking lots allow large crowds to gather at Montrose Beach more easily than at other lakefront beaches.

"Look at Oak Street Beach. Do you see this many parking spots there? Look at Lincoln Park. There just aren't this many parking spots in such a concentrated area in other parts of the city," Cappleman said. "I want the Park District and the police department to come up with a plan to discourage that many people from driving down there and parking."

Drawn by chatter on social media, the crowd gathered at Montrose Beach on Sunday for the Tamborazo Beach Party concert, but Chicago Park District officials said the festival didn't have permits to perform in the park.

On Monday, McCarthy said the department had a sufficient number of officers at Montrose Beach to quell the fracas.

"What I can tell you is, Montrose and the rest of the parks around the city are receiving significant attention, and will continue to do so," McCarthy told reporters.

How accessible is the CTA?

GOING PUBLIC

Tracy Swartz

 @tracyswartz

There are certain CTA stations that seem almost impossible to navigate, even if you are in shape.

Take the Sheridan Red Line stop, for example. The stairwell is narrow and known to get slick after rain.

Or the Central Purple Line stop in Evanston. If riders have an ailment that affects their ability to get around, they must deal with only stairs at that stop.

Accessibility in Chicago will be the topic of an expo Thursday at Navy Pier. The CTA, Metra and the suburban Pace bus system will participate in the event, where more than 100 exhibitors will showcase products and services for Chicagoans with disabilities, the city said.

"The CTA is committed to making sure transit is accessible to everyone, including customers with a wide range of physical and other disabilities," CTA spokeswoman Tammy Chase said.

All CTA buses and trains are wheelchair accessible while 99 out of 145 rail stations have an elevator and/or ramp to help riders reach the platform, Chase said.

The CTA added elevators to three South Side Red Line stations last year. The agency also plans to add elevators to the Wilson Red Line stop, the Quincy stop in the Loop, and the Illinois Medical District, UIC-Halsted and Addison Blue Line stops.

Elevators also are set for a Loop superstation at Washington Street and Wabash

Construction on the Damen Blue line stop will not include adding elevators to help accessibility to the platform. HEATHER CHARLES/TRIBUNE FILE

Avenue and a new Green Line stop at Cermak Road. The CTA said its goal is to make all stations accessible.

But some stations present more challenges than others. In the fall, the CTA is expected to temporarily close the Damen and California Blue Line stops for renovations in a $33 million project.

The CTA is slated to improve station-house lighting, flooring, signage, platform guardrails and decking at both stops, but will not add elevators to either station.

"Neither Damen or California has adequate existing space or the ability to expand outward" to accommodate an elevator, said CTA spokesman Brian Steele, who didn't rule out adding an elevator to those stations in the future. Such a plan probably would require the CTA to acquire nearby property.

The Damen and California renovations are part of a four-year, $492 million Blue Line overhaul. In that project, only the Addison stop in Irving Park will become accessible. From the Grand stop north, seven of 16 Blue Line stations are accessible.

"The Blue Line is a huge, important corridor," said Gary Arnold, public relations coordinator for Access Living, which advocates for more services for Chicagoans with disabilities. "Something we want to see is more access definitely there in that Blue Line project."

On the Red Line, the CTA also has proposed making the Lawrence, Argyle, Berwyn and Bryn Mawr stations accessible, but there is no funding for that $1.1 billion project. There are no current plans for the Sheridan stop or the northern Purple Line branch, where six of nine stations are not accessible for riders with disabilities.

Other improvements the CTA has on tap include adding door chimes to alert riders when trains arrive at the stations. Currently, door chimes only play when train doors are closing.

The change came after advocates said some riders with vision problems didn't realize trains had arrived until they heard the chimes that the doors were closing.

"I do think customers are going to notice [the chimes] right away," Steele said.

STATIONARY A weekly dispatch from a CTA station of note

This week: Loyola Red Line

It's been nearly a year since the CTA completed renovations to this Rogers Park station, which remained open as crews put in new lights, windows and floors in the station-house, among other improvements. Riders seemed to respond well to the $17 million changes, which also included additional bike racks.

Since September, the stop has logged double-digit weekday ridership growth. Ridership was down 13 percent in 2013 from January through August while the station was under construction. The station did see a rider bump in 2012 as the CTA temporarily closed other North Side Red Line stations for six-week improvements.

Next up: 69th Red Line station

THE YELLOW PAGES ARE COMING

IS THE ORIGINAL SEARCH ENGINE STILL RELEVANT IN THE SMARTPHONE AGE?

D By Mick Swasko | REDEYE

Doorstop, makeshift weight, a decent step stool or an instant recyclable: Phone books have many uses these days, but their intended purpose isn't always one of them. 1.2 million phone books have already been distributed this year to Chicago doorsteps. And Dex Media, one of the city's largest telephone directory providers, is readying a fresh set of a million more for distribution before year end.

But in an age of smartphones, Google and even electronic versions of the yellow and white pages, why are physical phone books still distributed?

"I don't know anybody who needs a phone book or felt the need to use one for 10 years," laments Hatie Parmeter, 22, of Logan Square. "I've lived in my building for a year and nobody has touched them. They are just wet, moldy paper, and it's disgusting."

Despite Parmeter's distaste, industry research shows people still do use them and there is still a market for advertising and listings, according to the Local Search Association.

Formerly the Yellow Pages Association, the LSA represents larger publishers and advertising companies in the industry. According to LSA research, 60 percent of Americans still report using a print phone book in the past year. Additionally 74 percent of people who use the Yellow Pages to find a business' number either purchased something from the business or intended to, said Wesley Young, LSA's vice president for public affairs.

"Everyone thinks the search engines dominate the search market," he said. "But the problem with small businesses is that if you don't end up on page one [of a search engine's results], you don't get found." While he said both the association and the industry are in a transition to digital, businesses—especially small local ones—still rely on the phone book.

Phone book advertising is still big business. The industry is forecasted to rake in $11.4 billion in 2014, of which 66 percent comes from printed directories, according to independent market researcher IBISWorld. Despite industry strength, demand is expected to fall 7 percent over the next five years as people continue to question its relevance.

Parmeter is hardly an opponent of print products. She subscribes to several magazines and does not want to see the medium die out to digital, she said. Still, she thinks the phone books that pile up don't have much value.

"It's kind of a silly thing to have strong feelings about, but hey, we could save a lot of trees," she said.

Paul Rettig, a landlord and 38-year-old Logan Square resident, got fed up with the five phone books delivered to his four-flat. "It makes the neighborhood look trashy with these things all over the place," he said.

He'd originally planned to dump all five in front of his alderman's office—a small protest. But phone book delivery isn't a local issue. Historically, part of the Illinois public utility code that governs telephones required an area's major telephone provider (in Chicago's case, AT&T) to distribute whitepages (phone numbers, addresses and names of subscribers) to all customers. However, in 2011, AT&T successfully petitioned the Illinois Commerce Commission to drop that requirement in Chicago.

Ultimately deciding the protest was "misdirected rage," Rettig didn't go through with it, he said. But they still pile up in front of buildings, often making them appear vacant. "It doesn't contribute to the safety of the neighborhoods or the cleanliness of it," he said.

Ramon Gonzales, 35, of Little Village, recently turned to the phone book when a search engine yielded unsatisfactory results about local window services. While he sympathizes with people who get upset during phone book delivery season, he gets creative with the heavy tomes. He uses many of them for pressing flowers, a hobby the garden writer, who calls himself "Mr. Green Thumb," has had for years.

"They're heavy, and the sheets of paper are absorbent," he said, adding he's found they also can be used for composting and in the garden as a weed barrier.

The LSA recognizes that residents may no longer want one of the many phone books with which they are affiliated, Young said. The association created yellowpagesoptout.com to allow residents to stop delivery completely to their address. And those who live in larger buildings, which receive dozens of copies, can approach their property manager about using the website to opt out of multiple copies. It can take up to 90 days to process a request, Young said.

"We want to get them in the hands of people that do use them," he said. "If folks don't love the book, we don't want to spend the money to deliver it."

1,793,000,000

There would be a total of 1,793,000,000 pages.

126 WILLIS TOWERS

You could stack the Willis Tower on top of itself 126 times before it would eclipse the height of the city's stacked phone books.

34.72 MILES

If stacked on top of one another, they would reach to 34.72 miles high. That's into the mesosphere, where jet powered planes can't fly.

306 MILES

Placed single-file lengthwise, the phone books would stretch 306 miles. That's even farther than the driving distance from Chicago to Louisville, Ky., via I-65.

PHONE BOOKS BY THE NUMBERS

Dex, one of Chicago's largest phone book distributors, expects to deliver 2.2 million phone books to Chicago residents in 2014. To get an idea of just how many that is, RedEye used its office phone book—an April 2013 Dex Yellow Pages for the 312, 773 and 872 area codes—and this year's Dex distribution to do some math. While not completely scientific, here's an idea of the massive phone book expanse in Chicago.

220,000 POUNDS Chicago's Cloud Gate (the Bean) weighs about 220,000 pounds. With a weight of 1.2 pounds each, the phone books equal exactly 12 Cloud Gates.

GETTING CREATIVE

In 2009, the last year the Environmental Protection Agency has individual data for phone books available, 650,000 tons of directories were introduced into U.S. waste and recycling streams. While phone books are a very small percent of total paper waste, their yearly distribution accounts for a trillion-plus tons of paper.

In order to keep them out of the trash can or blue bin, we recommend getting creative with your perhaps unwanted phone books. Here are some suggestions and examples of what others have done:

Tearing a phone book in half is an age old party trick. Just Google "rip a phone book" and dozens of YouTube videos will show you how to tackle this feat of strength.

Because they are recyclable and biodegradable, it's possible to use phone book pages for traditional and worm composting.

Baltimore-based artist Alex Queral has used X-Acto knives to sculpt dozens of three-dimensional faces from unused phone books, including pop-culture and well-known figures like Albert Einstein, Barack Obama and Bob Dylan.

Since the pages are thin and no one ever suspects a phone book as a hiding place, hollowing out a section of a phone book to store valuables will keep a book out of the trash.

In case of a complete, global technological blackout, phone books can be used to look up information on local business addresses. But in all seriousness, the back pages of many phone books include handy conversion charts and emergency preparedness tips.

Student loan scammers target of new lawsuits

By Megan Crepeau | RED EYE

Two companies offering borrowers help with student debt are running scams, according to Illinois Attorney General Lisa Madigan, making victims pay up front for sketchy solutions to problems that government programs could help solve for free.

Madigan

Madigan announced Monday that Illinois is the first state to file suit against two allegedly scammy student debt relief companies, one of which—First American Tax Defense—is based in Chicago.

"The scam for them is preying on financially susceptible individuals by claiming that they can eliminate or reduce your student loan debt," Madigan said at a news conference Monday. "What they really do is demand your credit card number, your bank account number and immediately charge you as much as $1,200."

It is illegal in Illinois for companies to charge money for debt relief services before any services have actually been rendered, and such companies must be licensed. First American Tax Defense and Texas-based Broadword Student Advantage violated both those laws, according to Madigan.

Neither First American Tax Defense nor Broadword Student Advantage could be reached for comment Monday.

Outstanding student loan debt has reached $1.2 trillion nationwide, and the average Illinois borrower owes $26,400, according to Dev Gowda of Illinois Public Interest Research Group.

Madigan's office advised borrowers to contact the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau and the National Consumer Law Center if they need help repaying student debt.

Charges filed in Rogers Park death

Authorities on Monday charged one man and are seeking two others in the shooting death of photographer Wil Lewis on Saturday as he waited for a bus in the 1300 block of West Devon Avenue. Eric Vaughn, a 31-year-old reputed gang member previously convicted of attempted murder, was ordered held on no bail on a murder charge after allegedly handing a gun to the shooter and instructing him to "wet that T-shirt up"—to make the gang rival they'd seen walking down the street bleed.

U.N. pulls staff out of chaotic Libya

4 The United Nations on Monday pulled its staff out of Libya, where at least 13 people have been killed in fighting in the eastern city of Benghazi and in Tripoli, forcing the closure of the international airport.

Egypt proposes Israeli-Palestinian ceasefire

5 Egypt launched an initiative Monday to halt fighting between Israel and Palestinian militants, proposing a ceasefire to be followed by talks in Cairo on settling the conflict in which Gaza authorities say more than 170 people have died.

Women, children deportees return to Honduras

6 A plane load of single mothers and children arrived in San Pedro Sula on Monday, ferried back to Honduras on a U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement charter flight. It was the first in a series of flights full of women and children that are expected to arrive from the U.S. to Honduras in the coming months.

Rival Iraqi infighting escalates

1 Residents of a town north of Baghdad found 12 corpses with execution-style bullet wounds Monday following fighting between rival Sunni insurgents that could eventually unravel a coalition which has seized much of northern and western Iraq.

The incident points to an intensification of infighting between the Islamic State and other Sunni groups, such as supporters of former dictator Saddam Hussein, which rallied behind the al-Qaida offshoot last month because of shared hatred for the Shiite-led Iraqi government.

Police in Muqadadiya, a town 50 miles north-east of the capital, said residents from the nearby town of Saadiya found the 12 corpses Monday after fighting overnight between Islamic State fighters and the Naqshbandi Army, a group led by Saddam allies.

Since the Islamic State swept through Iraqi cities and proclaimed its leader caliph of all Muslims last month, there have been increasing signs of conflict with other Sunni groups which do not necessarily share its rejection of Iraq's borders or its severe interpretation of Islam.

Washington, which recruited other Sunni fighters to defeat al-Qaida during the U.S. surge offensive in 2006-2007, hopes other Sunnis will again turn against the Islamic State and can be lured back into a power-sharing government in Baghdad.

The White House has pressed for an inclusive government but so far Shiite Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki has ignored calls from Sunnis and Kurds to step down in favor of a less polarising figure who would allow Sunnis a greater voice.

7 The wreck of the Costa Concordia is refloated and prepared to be towed away Monday. The cruise ship hit a reef off the Italian coast in January 2012 and partially capsized, killing 32 people. The ship will be broken up for scrap. EPA

Nickel in iPad caused skin allergy: study

Nickel in a first-generation iPad likely triggered an allergic skin reaction in an 11-year-old boy, a case that highlights an increasingly common condition linked to the rapid adoption of consumer electronics, according to a study published by the American Academy of Pediatrics on Monday.

Dr. Sharon Jacob and Dr. Shehla Admani, who are both dermatologists, studied severe skin rashes afflicting the unidentified 11-year-old boy for more than six months, before discovering that his daily use of an Apple iPad may have brought on the condition.

The boy's iPad, among the first versions of the device launched in 2010, tested positive for nickel, they said. The boy's dermatitis improved significantly after he started using a tablet case and began avoiding known sources of nickel in general, the study's authors said.

The report was the latest in a series of studies that have linked nickel content in electronics such as computers and smartphones to allergic reactions. Nickel is a common allergy-inducing metal.

10 reasons to shine the spotlight on Sox slugger Jose Abreu

Go ahead. Try and imagine a better rookie year than the one Jose Abreu is having. Time's up. Since signing with the White Sox, the 27-year-old slugger has given Chicago fans plenty of reasons to cheer. The first baseman will be one of three players representing the Sox at the All-Star Game on Tuesday in Minnesota. In case you still need them, here are 10 reasons to root for Abreu.

1. All those awards

If he hasn't already, Abreu should build (or buy) himself a trophy case, and a pretty big one at that. He was named American League Player of the Month for April as well as the AL Rookie of the Month for April and June. By the way, he's only the second player in baseball history to win player of the month and rookie of the month honors in his first month in the majors, according to ESPN.

2. All those home runs

At the virtual halfway point in the season, Abreu leads the majors in home runs with 29. And that's after he spent 15 days on the disabled list. His total is the second-highest in history by a rookie before the All-Star Break, trailing only Mark McGwire's 33 in 1987.

3. He has a son back home in Cuba

The family man defected from his home country in 2013. Although not all the details of his defection are known, some of his family remains in Cuba. "For me, I had just one thought: I wanted to provide my mom, sister, my kid, my dad with things I couldn't provide them in Cuba," Abreu told MLB.com. "The biggest home run I've ever hit is still in Cuba. That's my son Daniel Eduardo."

4. He's had an 18-game hitting streak

Abreu went on a rampage from June 15 to July 4, totaling 24 hits in that span. The last time a Sox rookie had such a streak was in 1963 (Pete Ward). Abreu also has a current 18-game road hitting streak.

5. He's a mama's boy.

"Especially I thank my mom for my life, so now it's the time for me to work for her," Abreu told MLB.com in February. "So I keep working every day and I don't get tired of it." His mom even chose his jersey number, 79.

*SELECTED AS AN ALL-STAR BUT IS INELIGIBLE TO PLAY IN TUESDAY'S GAME BECAUSE HE WAS TRADED TO OAKLAND

6. You can call him just about anything

Dubbed "Pito" by his uncle as a child, the nickname stuck in Cuba. And since he's been in the U.S., Abreu's teammates have taken to calling him "Yogi" (as in the cartoon bear). Adam Eaton calls him "Oso," which means "bear" in Spanish, though it hasn't really caught on. Sox TV announcer Ken "Hawk" Harrelson calls him "El Canon" ("the cannon"); that one hasn't picked up steam either. But stay tuned for the latest in the nickname game.

7. He can improvise

On a ground ball to the first base side, normally the first baseman will field the ball and toss it to the pitcher, who will cover the base. But on May 3 against Cleveland, Abreu had to get creative when a ball he fielded got stuck in the webbing of his glove. Instead of giving up, he took off his glove and tossed it to pitcher Scott Carroll covering first, ball and all. Way to get the out, Jose.

8. He's humble

While he's turning heads with his power, he remains humble and gracious for the opportunity he's been given. "It really is a gift from God to be able to have the privilege to play in the All-Star Game," he said after being selected. "It really is an honor. I can't tell you how happy I am."

9. He's here to stay

Abreu signed a six-year, $68 million deal with the Sox prior to the 2014 season. Barring some crazy circumstance, you can buy his jersey knowing it won't feel outdated anytime soon.

10. He's on Twitter!

Abreu started tweeting earlier this month. He tweets mostly in Spanish, but he's also a fan of the selfie. After about 11 days on the social media network (the first tweet on the account is from July 2) he has 1,501 followers. He says he'll try to add tweets in English with the help of a translator too. His handle is @79joseabreu.

1	Which team should Bulls fans dislike most: Cleveland or Miami?	Both. In the words of Johnny Ola, "Hyman Roth always makes money for his partners."	Cleveland, since their fans now live in both cities.	Miami. Cleveland is still recovering from the Craig Ehlo shot.	Miami. I'm still pissed about the first "Decision."	Detroit. Still no contest.
2	How can baseball's All-Star Game get more people to watch?	Let politicians play. "Big egos, money and made-for-TV drama make a fine metaphor for contemporary politics."	Make it so no one scores for 90 minutes. The world loves that.	Change the name from "Midsummer Classic" to "The Decision."	All players in jackstraps only. (Well, you'd get more gals and gays...)	Let me pitch, like I've been been asking to do for years.
3	The first half of the Chicago baseball season will be remembered for ...	Seriously? The baseball season doesn't begin until after the All-Star Game.	... the time Ronald Belisario didn't give up a run.	... allowing us to spend more time away from television.	Oh. Did that happen already?	... Derrick Rose nursing his knee back to health.
4	What would Patrick Kane and Jonathan Toews say to the Hawks prospects at camp this week?	"Bring your 'A' game but be responsible! Chelsea Daggers come a dime a dozen."	"You can't always be drinking and having sex. You have to play hockey too." —Kaner	"Guys, next season one of you will fulfill the important role of handling our dry cleaning."	"If you aren't physically capable of growing a beard, GO HOME NOW."	"Anyone see the Stanley Cup? We seem to have lost it."
5	Making an eagle on the last hole to win the British Open is like ...	... "Inbounds pass to Jordan, here's Michael at the foul line, a shot on Ehlo ..." followed by fist pumps and uproar.	... doing something mildly athletic in a sport.	... having the perfect comeback insult the last time you see your ex.	... winning a World Cup match by six goals! Wait ...	... LeBron James returning to his hometown.

Online Accounting Certificates

Northwestern's online post-baccalaureate certificates provide working professionals with the precise education they need for career advancement or CPA preparation. Courses in three structured certificates, Fundamentals of Accounting, Advanced Accounting and CPA Preparation, are available online. Online accounting courses can also be combined with on-campus courses to meet the requirements of accounting certificates or certificates in other subjects.

This much closer to The Return, Part II

Chicago Tribune

Count coach Mike Krzyzewski as one of many Chicagoans hoping to see Derrick Rose return to form.

Rose was named Monday as one of 19 players on the USA World Cup national team training camp roster, which will practice in Las Vegas from July 28 to Aug. 1 before another roster cut is made.

"I'd like to see him play like the Derrick of old," Krzyzewski said on a teleconference. "He's one of the best players in the world, an MVP in the NBA."

The national team coach has received positive feedback on Rose's health as he works to return from his second knee injury in two years.

"What we've heard is he's in great shape," said Krzyzewski, a Chicago native and longtime Duke coach. "Hopefully he's going to be in top shape. Derrick's a great guy. I know he loves representing his country. Hopefully this will be a launching pad for him for a great NBA season."

After the camp in Las Vegas, the team will train Aug. 14-15 in Chicago, with an exhibition game against Brazil at the United Center on Aug. 16. A 12-man roster will participate in the FIBA World Cup in Spain from Aug. 30-Sept. 14.

Bulls coach Tom Thibodeau serves as Krzyzewski's assistant.

Not about the money

Gasol

To gauge Pau Gasol and Kirk Hinrich's confidence in the Bulls' chances to win a title, look no further than the money they left on the table. Gasol, whose Bulls deal averages $7.3 million over three years, turned down offers of $11.5 million annually from the L.A. Lakers and $11 million from Atlanta. Hinrich, whose two-year deal averages $2.8 million, could have made upward of $4 million annually from Utah and Charlotte.

Points for pronunciation

The Bulls on Tuesday traded forward Greg Smith to Dallas in exchange for the rights to Tadija Dragicevic. They also dealt forward Anthony Randolph, cash considerations and two future second-round picks for the rights to Miroslav Radovic. Which might be the last time you hear from any of them.

Erin Andrews (right) interviews Russell Wilson after a game in November. GETTY IMAGES/FILE

Oliver out, Andrews in

If you've been missing popular sideline reporter Erin Andrews since she left ESPN for Fox, two things: One, you need to watch more baseball. Two, this season Andrews will be the sideline reporter for Fox's No. 1 NFL broadcast crew—much to the chagrin of Pam Oliver, who gets bumped to other duties. "To go from the lead crew to no crew was a little shocking," she said.

Well, it's no Stanley Cup

Gone is the Faberge egg-like crystal football awarded to the BCS champion. Replacing it is a 35-pound, 2-foot-tall trophy made from 24-karat gold, stainless steel and bronze with an actual-sized football on top. That's what will go to the winner of the College Football Playoff. Good thing those kids lift weights.

World Cup FTW

What's German for "ratings gold"? ESPN's coverage of the World Cup final Sunday drew an average of 17.3 million viewers on ABC and 9.2 million on Univision—the Spanish-language outlet in the U.S.—for a total of 26.5 million; the 2010 final drew 24.7 million.

THE MOUTHWATCH

I would say "If you get a chance to take pictures with people backstage, don't pass it up." I passed it up like, "Oh, I'll come back and get that. I've got to do this." No, "Just go over and get the picture" because there were so many people I'm a fan of."

—Comedian Rob Riggle (left), to the Tribune's Luis Gomez, on what advice he would give to ESPN's host Drake

ALWAYS THE BRIDESMAID

KATHERINE HEIGL WANTS ANOTHER '27 DRESSES' GO-AROUND? OK ...

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

You might be confused about why we've seen so much of Katherine Heigl lately. Turns out, girl's got a new show coming in the fall—NBC's "State of Affairs"—and is busy with promotion. So naturally, the press has been grilling her about whether she's difficult and whether she thinks she does too many rom-coms and whatnot, but what we REALLY want to know is, does she want to do another movie with James Marsden?

"We need to do a sequel to that!" she said Saturday night of "27 Dresses," in which she paraded about in a series of horrible frocks. This is just the news we were waiting for. To save producers some cash, we combed through some of Katherine's old red-carpet outfits for recyclable looks. #### 'Roswell' summer tour party July 2001

This is adorable in an "aw look, she doesn't have a stylist yet!" kind of way. It is, however, hideous in every other way.

Escada 2006 Spring/Summer collection launch Nov. 2005

Remember back when these shrug things were popular in the mid-'00s? They weren't any more attractive then.

Screen Actors Guild awards Jan. 2006

Obviously you have a friend whose wedding theme is Goth Southern, right? This pose also is not as innocent as she thinks it is.

'27 Dresses' premiere Jan. 2008

As a bridesmaid, you should be a gorgeous clone of the bride who just follows her around to do her bidding all night. Nothing creepy about this at all.

Hot in Hollywood event Aug. 2008

Again with the bow. This may be a little too business-y for a bridesmaid, though we do enjoy the hair.

'The Ugly Truth' premiere July 2009

The ugly truth here is that this probably was someone's actual bridesmaid dress, then Katherine decided to zest it up with a little mosquito netting.

'Life As We Know It' premiere Sept. 2010

Are bridesmaids meant to be a wrapped gift for the bride? If so, this is perfect.

THE DIGIT $39

That's the cost of a single-day ticket to the Hideout Block Party & Onion A.V. Fest, which went on sale Monday. Friday's lineup includes Death Cab For Cutie, Hamilton Leithauser and The Handsome Family, while you can catch The War On Drugs, The Dismemberment Plan and Empires on Saturday. Two-day passes are available for $65.

On the first day of Weird Al ...

Weird Al has promised us eight days of weird music videos, and eight days of weird music videos we shall get! "Tacky," a play on Pharrell Williams' ear-splitting radio hit "Happy," kicked things off Monday with cameos from Aisha Tyler, Jack Black, Margaret Cho, Kristen Schaal and Eric Stonestreet. They're all sporting outfits that our aunt usually wears as a joke during Christmas, thus filling us with delight. Keep 'em coming!

We're done here

Attention, everyone who's friends with their exes: Zoe Saldana has a message for you. "I don't want to be the one going, 'I'm cool, because I'm friends with all my exes.' There's a reason why you're called an ex. I crossed you off my list. Moving on," she told Marie Claire mag in its August issue. "You cross a line, you need to know that you're going to walk this Earth knowing that there's an individual who has no respect for you." Yeah, we want to hear about those breakups for sure.

You sexy thing

Fear not, exhibitionists: Your iPad sex tape is safe. A GQ reporter called Apple's tech support to fact-check the premise of the upcoming Jason Segel/Cameron Diaz movie "Sex Tape"—namely, that their video would be automatically uploaded to the cloud and shared with anyone they gifted with an iPad. "Impossible. They can't connect to your iPad over, like, a network and just get info. You would be the one who has control," "Dave" the Apple guy said. PHEW.

HOT DATE

SATURDAY

That's when you and your pet can meet Shorty and Hercules from Animal Planet's "Pit Boss." The doggy star and his human sidekick will be appearing as part of the Windy City Pet Expo from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the Odeum Expo Center in Villa Park. We suspect dog treats will be plentiful.

THE QUOTE

“That'll make it worse! Wine is crying juice. Rum is worse. Oh my God.”

—“Parks and Recreation” star Retta, to Vulture, when a reporter offered her alcohol after she started crying about the show's upcoming, final season. Let it all out!
